

05) 520m Silverberry (Elaeagnus pungens) グミ

Seijuji Temple 清住寺内

2-5-13 Honkawa-cho, Naka-ku, Hiroshima

中区本川町二丁目 5-13

The tree was burned, but it sprouted later. The dead tree standing next to it is a cherry tree burned by the atomic bomb.

The temple was established in Yoshida to the north of Hiroshima in the early 16th century. It was moved to this location in 1590 at about the same time when the feudal lord Mori Terumoto built Hiroshima Castle and moved from Yoshida to Hiroshima. This was one of the biggest temples in Hiroshima until it was burned by the atomic bombing.

Please note that this document has been created by volunteers who would like to support the tree-planting initiative of Green Legacy Hiroshima. Despite every possible effort to ensure accuracy, we cannot ascertain the content. Copying photos and sentences without permission is prohibited.