About UNITAR

As the training arm of the United Nations, the United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR) is an autonomous institution within the UN system that provides innovative learning solutions to individuals, organizations, and institutions in the fields of diplomacy, economic and social development, peace, and security.

Over the last 60 years, UNITAR has contributed to developing the capacities of Member States and other stakeholders to enhance global decision-making, and to support country-level and regional-level actions for shaping a better future and enabling positive change.

Why Choose UNITAR?

Participants who choose UNITAR receive world-class training, and the opportunity to expand the reach of their global networks and increase their career prospects, all whilst learning from practitioners and fellow participants from different cultures, backgrounds, and worldviews.

Over the past 60 years, UNITAR has acquired unique expertise and experience in designing and delivering a variety of training activities. We have become a leading institute in the provision of customized and creative learning solutions to institutions and individuals from both the public and private sectors.

With a strategy focused on achieving the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), UNITAR supports the implementation of the 2030 Agenda. UNITAR empowers individuals and institutions, which leads to the change of mindset and behaviors.

Learn from Seasoned Experts

UNITAR's courses are taught by experts in the fields of international relations, diplomatic practice, and international law from academic and international circles - including practitioners from both within, and outside, the UN system.

UNITAR's Work in Multilateral Diplomacy

UNITAR's Division for Multilateral Diplomacy provides activities for diplomats, government officials, international civil servants, and private sector entities that cover a wide range of policy domains, including bilateral and multilateral negotiation, artificial intelligence, environmental and climate change diplomacy, economic diplomacy, conference diplomacy, public diplomacy and other related topics. In addition, we provide capacities and skills development activities such as negotiation skills and techniques and public speaking, amongst many others.

UNITAR is uniquely positioned to support countries in strengthening national institutions for building capacity at all levels and fostering the participation of Member States in global conversations.

Apart from our open face-to-face training and e-Learning courses, UNITAR also provides the opportunity to gain knowledge and skills relevant to multilateral diplomacy and international law through post-graduate programmes. UNITAR partners with academic institutions across the globe, combining the academic strengths of these esteemed universities with our world-class executive-style training.

Customized Trainings

Customized Trainings

UNITAR offers tailor-made trainings based on an in-depth assessment of the specific requirements and learning objectives of the stakeholder(s).

This personalized approach ensures maximum engagement and knowledge retention, resulting in tangible skill development and enhanced performance.

Our training activities, which are offered in three formats: Face-to-face, online, and blended (hybrid), provide a variety of benefits for practitioners and organizations:

- Ability to build Executive skills through workshops taught by high-level UNITAR resource persons and experts in their fields
- Ability to develop Practical skills relevant for national and international careers
- Access to unique networking opportunities with UN practitioners and industry experts and a global network of peers

Training Portfolio

The training activities outlined on the following pages (11-12) offer insight into UNITAR's extensive, customizable portfolio, however this is not a comprehensive list.

All training activities can be customized in terms of content, duration and/or venue.

MSc in Human Rights and Diplomacy

Partner: University of Stirling

Human rights are omnipresent in international public discourse and everyday life. These rights, however, have been under increasing pressure in recent years, with wars, violations, and abuses committed against minorities across the world.

UNITAR and the University of Stirling are proud to offer a Master of Science in Human Rights and Diplomacy to address this concern. The programme is taught jointly between UNITAR and the University of Stirling's schools of Law, Philosophy, and International Relations.

It includes interactive seminars led by top University of Stirling professors, and workshops by prominent UN experts in critical skill building; a 3-day study visit to the “capital” of Human Rights in Geneva, Switzerland; and a 3-month Human Rights on-the-job placement in a UN Agency.

Master in International Leadership and Negotiation

Partner: Universidad Europea de Valencia

The increase in volatility, uncertainty, complexity, and ambiguity (VUCA) in today's world means there is no longer one approach to management that can be applied to all organizations and work environments. Leaders must adjust their leadership strategies to be more flexible and adapt to a variety of challenges and situations.

In this context, the Division for Multilateral Diplomacy of the United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR) and the Universidad Europea de Valencia have jointly developed a Master's Programme in "International Leadership and Negotiation."

The one-year programme is designed to prepare students to lead global initiatives for change, and provide them with the necessary negotiation skills to positively impact their organization and environment.

Master in Anti-Corruption and Diplomacy

Partner: International Anti-Corruption Academy (IACA)

In today's globalized and increasingly complex world, the nexus between Diplomacy and Anti-Corruption efforts is more important than ever.

The United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR) and the International Anti-Corruption Academy (IACA) joined forces to offer a rigorous, diverse, and innovative anti-corruption and diplomacy curriculum. It reflects a variety of academic disciplines necessary for providing comprehensive insight into compliance systems, economics, ethics, digital and cyber diplomacy, international law, and more.

Essential skills for an international career such as leadership, cross-cultural communication, negotiation skills, and public speaking are at the core of the curriculum. Programme delivery is based on virtual live interaction, with one summer module taking place at the UNITAR Headquarters in Geneva, Switzerland, ensuring effective knowledge transfer and networking opportunities that go beyond graduation.

After the successful defence of a research thesis, graduates will acquire an internationally recognized degree of a total of 90 ECTS, while benefitting from both the academic and practical focus of the programme, delivered by two leading institutions in the field.

Cross-Cultural Communication

Developing cultural awareness, competences and skills

In today's world, individuals and organizations need to navigate intercultural situations and interactions on a daily basis. Cross-cultural competences need to be developed constantly in order to operate effectively in these multilateral settings, avoid misunderstandings and prejudices in negotiation and communication processes. In that context, the awareness of culture's effects on interactions, refined sensitivity, and competences and skills can enhance interactions within international relations and will consequently lead to more constructive outcomes. The general objective of this e-Learning course is to develop the understanding of culture's effects on communication in the international field of work. With the focus on cultural awareness development, this course will teach valuable tools to enhance competences and skills to navigate intercultural interactions for improved and sustainable international relations.

Overcoming Negotiation Deadlocks

In the context of developing bilateral contractual relations, negotiation has taken a prominent place as a decision-making and regulation process. Also, the challenge of renewed multilateralism is closely linked to the ability of the international community to foster truly productive negotiation processes in a rapidly evolving global context. As the main training arm of the UN, the United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR) is responding to this eminent challenge with its ground-breaking training initiative “Overcoming Negotiation Deadlocks” intended to serve the entire community of negotiators worldwide. This course aims to equip participants with practical skills to enhance individual negotiation capacity and lead through situations of deadlock. It will help learners to improve their negotiation performance in order to obtain better outcomes in bilateral and multilateral negotiations, but also to become brokers of agreements when solutions look impossible.

International Law

The subject of international law brings a lot of concepts to mind, from war and settlement of disputes between States, protection of the environment, responsibilities and obligations, to human rights protection between citizens, refugees of different States and corporations. Globalization has forced us to interact with each other, making it essential to have common rules to guide and sustain relationships (of trade, investment, technology, etc.) between individuals and States from different regions and continents.

This course provides participants with a comprehensive knowledge of the fundamentals of International Law that is necessary to understand the importance, role and purpose of international law in the contemporary legal order and international community.

This course is available in a Self-Paced or Webinar Modality. Please visit our website for more details - prices vary.

Law of International Organizations

International organizations are playing an increasingly important role in the international legal order. They are active in virtually all fields of human activity, they regularly conclude international treaties and continuously interact with other actors of international law. Nowadays, they wield growing normative powers. For those working for or dealing with international organizations, a sound understanding of the law of international organizations thus appears indispensable. UNITAR's self-paced course on the Law of International Organizations is structured in a way to cover the main legal questions related to international organizations, from both a theoretical and practical perspective.

The goal of this course is to provide participants with a comprehensive knowledge of the key issues of the Law of International Organizations that is necessary to understand the role and position of international organizations in the contemporary legal order.

Law of Treaties

The International Law of Treaties is a set of international principles and rules regulating the conclusion procedure of treaties, as well as the issues of operation, amendments and modifications, termination, suspension and invalidity of treaties. For those involved in the drafting, negotiation and conclusion of international treaties, a sound knowledge of the Law of Treaties is indispensable. Efficient implementation and application of international legal norms is impossible without knowing the essentials of the International Law of Treaties.

The goal of this course is to provide participants with the fundamental theoretical and practical knowledge of the key issues surrounding the International Law of Treaties. You will gain a comprehensive understanding of the provisions of the universal conventions as the sources of the International Law of Treaties and developed critical skills of analysis and interpretation of cases regarding contemporary practice.

International Environmental Law

Multilateral Environmental Agreements (MEAs) are the predominant legal method for addressing transboundary environmental problems. Adopted by States, MEAs are standard-settings instruments for effective global environmental protection. However, nowadays some States, particularly least developed and developing countries, face the challenge of implementing over 300 MEAs due to limited technical, financial and human resources.

This course will provide you with the basics of International Environmental Law (IEL) by identifying its sources and fundamental principles, the law-making process, its main actors, as well as the implementation and compliance procedures needed to understand and apply Multilateral Environmental Agreements.

International Humanitarian Law

War remains a matter of great concern to humanity. Recent conflicts have demonstrated that the ravages of war continue to have a devastating impact especially on the civilian population. War might be the "end of the law" as one said, but International Law is not silent on armed conflicts.

International Humanitarian Law (IHL), born on the battlefield of Solferino in 1859 and evolving to address modern warfare challenges, aims to regulate the means and methods of warfare, even in the era of advanced weaponry like drones and "killer robots." However, increasing weapon complexity makes it difficult to differentiate between civilians and combatants, and new forms of armed conflict, such as the "war on terrorism," create fresh challenges for safeguarding civilian lives and property.

The course provides participants with an advanced knowledge of IHL and to offer an innovative analysis of the legal uncertainties surrounding new-age military capabilities namely drones and other weaponry systems.
