President: Mr. Shahid ..... (Maldives)

The meeting was called to order at 10 a.m.

Agenda item 75

Strengthening of the coordination of humanitarian and disaster relief assistance of the United Nations, including special economic assistance

Report of the Secretary-General (A/76/334)

(a) Strengthening of the coordination of emergency humanitarian assistance of the United Nations

Reports of the Secretary-General (A/76/74, A/76/320 and A/76/376)

Draft resolutions (A/76/L.23, A/76/L.24, A/76/L.26 and A/76/L.27)

(b) Assistance to the Palestinian people

Report of the Secretary-General (A/76/78)

Draft resolution (A/76/L.25)

(c) Special economic assistance to individual countries or regions

The President: This debate is timely, as resolution 46/182, which created the humanitarian system as we know it today, is turning 30. The importance of that resolution cannot be overstated. It was and remains a commitment by the international community to protecting the world's most vulnerable people and empowering and enabling those who want to help. I am glad to say that many of the institutions, partnerships and principles that the resolution has nurtured remain with us today, albeit with changes and adaptations to reflect the times.

However, as we mark this thirtieth anniversary, our discussion today is far from positive. Humanitarian concerns remain prevalent throughout the world. In fact, the Global Humanitarian Overview 2022 notes that nearly 300 million people in 63 countries are in need of humanitarian assistance. The United Nations and partners will target assistance to 185 million of those most in need — the greatest number ever. That assistance comes at a financial cost. The Global Humanitarian Overview 2022 calls for $41 billion, the largest appeal ever made. I urge the international community to support the appeal. We have a moral obligation to protect and provide for the most vulnerable. Let us live up to those ideals. Our discussion today is focused on how we can strengthen the coordination of disaster and humanitarian relief assistance. In that regard, I will emphasize four key points.

First, we cannot ignore the impact of the coronavirus disease (COVID-19). It is widely known that the suffering of those furthest behind has been disproportionately greater during the pandemic. The least developed countries, landlocked developing countries and small island developing States, already burdened with debt and structural deficiencies, have had to face yet another crisis. For those already on the precipice of humanitarian need, the pandemic may have been the final push. We know full well, with data from the World Bank, that hundreds of millions have been forced into extreme poverty and food insecurity. Let us use the COVID-19 recovery to address those
