Relationship of the Security Council to the General Assembly

Briefing for delegates on the 76th session of the General Assembly

Security Council Affairs Division | Ms. Blanca Montejo, Senior Political Affairs Officer

New York, 14 September 2021
The GA and the Council: some key differences

General Assembly
• Composition: 193 members (all with equal status)
• Scope: any questions or any matters within the scope of the Charter of the United Nations
• Decision-making: two-thirds majority for ‘important questions’
• On the maintenance of international peace and security: recommendations

Security Council
• Composition: 15 members (5 permanent and 10 non-permanent)
• Scope: primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security
• Decision-making: nine votes absent veto for substantive questions
• On the maintenance of international peace and security: decisions
UN Charter: key provisions in a nutshell

Article 10
Except for Article 12, the GA may discuss or make recommendations (also to the Council) on any questions or matters within the scope of the Charter or relating to the functions and powers of other organs.

Article 11
The GA may discuss and make recommendations on general principles and questions relating to the maintenance of international peace and security. But if action is necessary, it shall be referred to the Security Council before or after discussion. The GA can also bring matters to the attention of the Security Council.
UN Charter: key provisions in a nutshell

Article 12
While the Security Council is seized, the General Assembly shall not make any recommendation with regard to that dispute or situation unless the Security Council so requests. Consequently, the SG notifies the GA of any matters on the Council’s agenda

Article 14
Subject to Article 12, the GA may recommend measures for the peaceful adjustment of any situation, which it deems likely to impair the general welfare or friendly relations among nations
UN Charter: key provisions in a nutshell

Article 24
Member States have conferred on the Security Council the primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security and agreed that in carrying out its duties under this responsibility it acts on their behalf. Consequently, the Council acts in accordance with the Charter and submits annual and special reports to the GA for its consideration.
